The Key West Shrimp House in Indiana Serves Delicious Food and History. When it comes to unexpected restaurants in Indiana, here is one that will make you think the Hoosier State moved to the coast. Situated in an ancient building, this historic place is all about great food and even better views. This eatery is set in a building from the 1800s. It was built to be a button factory, and the original foundation is still in place. The dining areas are simple yet elegant and full of light and space. Guests enjoy some of the best service in the entire state at this place. The views are the best thing about this restaurant. You'll be able to see across the river into Kentucky. You may even see barges and tugboats moving cargo around the water. Shrimp is the main specialty here, but guests can also order seafood items like fried or baked cod, catfish, salmon, and oysters. You'll be amazed at how fresh everything tastes. Seafood lovers unite at this magnificent eatery. You'll truly feel like you're in southern Florida from the first bite.

Historic Sites in Madison Indiana
www.visitmadison.org/historic-sites

With more than 133 blocks of outstanding architecture, Madison's downtown business district is one of the country's largest National Historic Landmark Districts. Madison's founders brought with them their own history, which is displayed in the architecture of the homes and buildings that make up this historic gem. Travel America says, "Madison is an outdoor museum of architecture." The crown jewel of Madison historic sites is Lanier Mansion State Historic Site – open all year with guided tours on the hour.
